THE SIXTH GUN

There are many augurs
in the world... and secrets to uncover...

...If you know
where to look.

But looking in the right
place and having guts
enough to keep your eyes open don't always go hand in hand.

That's how the things
men wasn't meant
to discover stay that way, leastways for decent folks.

Drake Sinclair had stared straight down the gullet of the beast on more than one occasion...

And while he had known one or two decent folks in his time, he didn't rightly count himself
among their number.

But here's the thing - your perspective changes once you get behind that big old desk.

You need to know that everything I did in my two terms leading this nation was in its best interest.

It all boils down to one essential fact:

Seven years ago, NASA detected some sort of mining or construction operation in the asteroid belt, up between Mars and Jupiter.

We don't have anything near there, and no other country does either.

Even if we did, human technology just isn't capable of what they're doing out there.

They haven't attempted to...

This is

They haven't attempted to make contact, and we still don't know very much, even after seven years.
