■ The story so far...

As teenagers on a hike with their friend Amy Fishbein, best frenemies Eric Henderson and Woody Van Chelton found a dead man surrounded by cash and a pistol. When another man showed up to take the cash, Woody tried to fighten him off with the gun, but he pulled the trigger. The man hit the ground, and Woody ran.

Years later, Eric and Woody went on to become superheroes after a freak accident in their fathers' lab gave them energy-based powers. As Quantum and Woody, they shared a bond via energy control bands permanently attached to their wrists. They drove each other nuts.

Today, Quantum and Woody are middle-aged men who haven't seen each other in years. Eric Henderson is mentoring a new, young superheroic duo—a Caucasian man under the Quantum mask, and a fourteen-year-old Woody—and the original Woody has come to stop him from endangering a child. An enigmatic thief named Koro has drawn out the heroes to stop his heists, and attracted the attention of a mysterious organization called the Sword. But over breakfast with a shadowy puppet master named Ali Rusen, Eric discovers that Koro is a synthetic human being—a living prototype weaponized for national security, for sale to the world's intelligence agencies. Quantum and Woody, meanwhile, brief their predecessor Woody on the nature of Koro's heists—the thief is after assets that house the encoded recipe to create more synthetic soldiers like himself!
